Cincinnati "Hit Below Belt" At Big Gathering, Executive Claims

THIRD TERM IS HINTED

Specific Graft, Corruption Charge Demanded

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—Governor Martin L. Davey today accused Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati, Democratic national committeeman for Ohio, of "hitting below the belt" in his criticism of the state administration at the Jackson Day dinner here last Saturday night.

"You creep up from behind and stab in the back with a poisoned dagger," Gov. Davey wrote in an open letter to Sawyer.

In his Jackson Day address before 900 Democrats, Sawyer, a former lieutenant governor, said that "charges of corruption and graft are rampant. Men in high position in the party have become mysteriously rich; state employees are nervous, unsettled and apprehensive of the future."

Speech Prepared
Sawyer had not been provided a place on the Jackson Day speaking program but announced to the press in advance that he had prepared a speech. At the last minute, State Democratic Chairman Francis Poulson called on Sawyer to speak.

"I fear that the blood which runs in your veins is cold as ice-water and that the virtue which you pretend is a cloak for sordid, scheming selfishness," the governor wrote.

At the same time the Chinese army organ, Sao Tang Pao, predicted that major changes would take place as a result of the generalissimo's personal intervention.

ST. LOUIS ASKS DEAN TO PITCH FOR LESS CASH

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 14—(UP)—The St. Louis Cardinals today offered Dizzy Dean, right-handed pitcher, a 1938 contract calling for $10,000—less than half the salary paid him last season when he won 13 and lost 10 games for his worst season in the major leagues.

Disclosure of contract terms was made by Branch Rickey, vice president of the Red Birds. At the same time Mrs. Dean announced in Florida that the contract would not be signed.

"I'm sorry, but we did not send Mrs. Dean a contract," Rickey commented. "If Dizzy says he will not sign that's another story but we expect him to come to terms."

Dean is said to have received $25,500 for the 1937 season.

SARASOTA, Fla., Jan. 14—(UP)—Mrs. Dizzy Dean insisted today that her baseball pitching husband has made good in the filling station business and does not have to play ball for a living any more.

FORD SUMMONS 10,000 MEN TO RESUME DUTIES

DEARBORN, Mich., Jan. 14—(UP)—Ten thousand men were notified today by the Ford Motor company to return to their jobs at the River Rouge plant Monday. The back-to-work order will bring the working force up to approximately 47,000, approximately 38,000 under normal.

Ford spokesmen said more workers would be returned at intervals until the assembly line is brought to normal operations.

The Ford plant has not maintained a full production schedule since it closed for the Christmas holidays. Until then an average of 20,000 cars a week had been turned out.

Ford's rehiring order followed a similar move early this week by Chrysler Corporation, which reopened with 55,000 employees, approximately 20,000 short of a complete working force.

Hudson continued to put on extra men as production got under way on the new, low priced "112" series announced recently.

AUTHOR BEATEN IN FIGHT OVER DRAMA REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 14—(UP)—Jack Kirkland, author of the phenomenal stage success "Tobacco Road," was so irked by the critical roasting of his new play "Tortilla Flat" that he punched Richard Watts, drama critic of the New York Herald-Tribune, it became known today.

The punch was delivered last night in the Artists and Writers restaurant near the Herald Tribune office, a most unfortunate locale for the playwright because it is frequented by many of Watts' best friends.

Jack Beek, proprietor of the restaurant, promptly socked Kirkland in the jaw and added a few more wallops as the playwright reeled backwards to the door. There Ralph Hewitt, former Columbia All-American football player, tried to stop the fight. But when he learned Watts had been hit, he swung at Kirkland himself.

The covered wagon troupe is following in the footsteps of the original expedition that marched from Massachusetts to Marietta 150 years ago.

HUMPHREY HIT BY SENATORS

Liquor Department Chief Promises To Suspend "Padding" Worker

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—The senate graft investigating committee today had the promise of Alfred Humphrey, state liquor enforcement chief, that he would "immediately" suspend Joseph Malden, enforcement officer for the Canton district.

Humphrey told the committee that by tonight he will have decided whether he will discharge Malden, who was revealed by the committee to have forged and padded expense vouchers.

"We do not intend to go along with you because we hope and propose to relieve you of your job before we are through," James Metzger, counsel for the graft committee, shouted at Humphrey.

Humphrey explained that he had taken no action on the Malden case since Dec. 29, when the padded expense vouchers were exposed, because he had been unable to obtain a transcript of the committee's hearing.

The graft committee yesterday won its point with Finance Director M. Ray Allison when he surrendered vouchers for witness fees and expenses which the committee had requested. He was to have been cited for contempt of the senate for refusing to produce the records. The contempt proceedings were dropped when Allison gave up the vouchers.

The charge on which he was given a hearing, one of six filed, was brought by Emmet C. Shupe, Saltcreek township. Mr. Shupe charges Mathewson, using the name of William Mason, obtained a $40 note from him on Dec. 18, for an insurance policy. Mathewson had previously been bound to the grand jury under a similar bond when he denied a charge of obtaining $38 from Clarence Maxon on Dec. 15.

Others who filed charges and the amounts alleged to have been obtained from them are Russell Anderson, $25 on Dec. 15; Rameal D. and Berlin D. Hinton, $30 each on Dec. 17, and Charles Andrew

Council Called Tonight To Vote Ordinance Asking Construction Bids

WELL BEING DRILLED

Mayor Issues Notices To City Officials

Following approval of plans and specifications for the municipal disposal plant by both the state board of health and the Public Works Administration, a special meeting of city council will be held at 8:15 p. m. Friday for consideration of an ordinance to advertise for construction bids.

Notices of the meeting were issued late Thursday by Mayor W. B. Cady. The ordinance to be considered will authorize L. E. Miller, service director, to advertise for bids for the balance of the plant construction, Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said. Drilling of a well, the first work in connection with the plant construction, started last week.

Approval of the plans and specifications by the P. W. A. was received this week, Mr. Leist said, and that of the state board of health was brought to Circleville Thursday afternoon by Floyd G. Browne, of Marion, engineer employed by the city on the project.

The city has issued $75,000 worth of bonds to cover its share of the project, and allotment of $61,363 was made by P. W. A., and the Container Corporation, whose wastes will be treated in the municipal plant, has agreed to provide $15,000 if needed for the plant construction.

FOUNDRY FIGHT HURTS DEPUTIES AND UNION MEN

NEW HAVEN, Mich., Jan. 14—(UP)—Peace was restored to this industrial village today after a night of rioting at the New Haven foundry.

Two deputy sheriffs were injured and numerous unionists suffered minor hurts as they struggled for control of the foundry. Officers, after four attempts to break through picket lines which had surrounded the plant since it was closed three days ago because of labor difficulties, were repulsed and a truce was called.

Numerous shots were fired into the air as deputies made unsuccessful attempts to penetrate the picket lines to go to the aid of a small guard which earlier had entered the foundry. Tear gas bombs were hurled into the mass of 700 pickets and sympathizers who milled around the plant but they did not disperse.

Meanwhile Sumner D. Lampkins, owner of the foundry which makes heavy castings for Chrysler, Hudson and other manufacturers, was in conference with officials of the United Automobile Workers union. After a seven-hour session, a truce was called and Lampkins said he would not attempt to reopen the foundry until a final settlement was reached.

Two deputy sheriffs were injured and numerous unionists suffered minor hurts as they struggled for control of the foundry. Officers, after four attempts to break through picket lines which had surrounded the plant since it was closed three days ago because of labor difficulties, were repulsed and a truce was called.

Numerous shots were fired into the air as deputies made unsuccessful attempts to penetrate the picket lines to go to the aid of a small guard which earlier had entered the foundry. Tear gas bombs were hurled into the mass of 700 pickets and sympathizers who milled around the plant but they did not disperse.

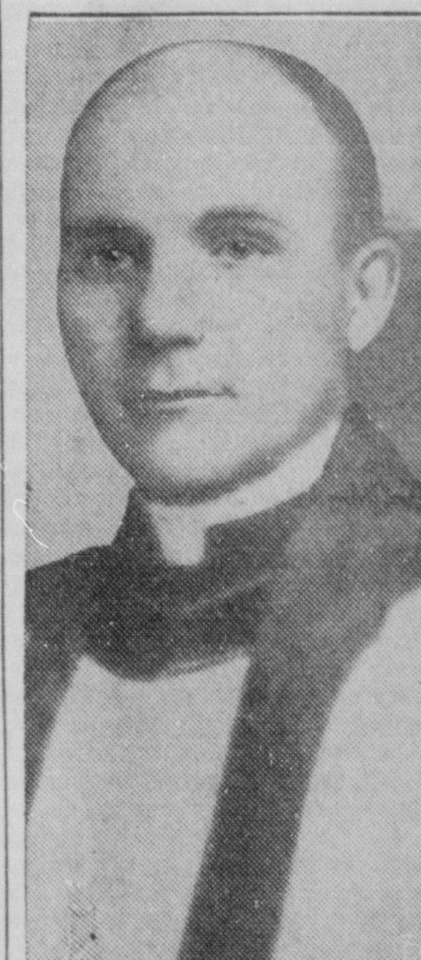

Meanwhile Sumner D. Lampkins, owner of the foundry which makes heavy castings for Chrysler, Hudson and other manufacturers, was in conference with officials of the United Automobile Workers union. After a seven-hour session, a truce was called and Lampkins said he would not attempt to reopen the foundry until a final settlement was reached.

List of Witnesses Nearly Exhausted After Truck Drivers Appear

SUPPLY MEN HEARD

Wage Scale Differences Basis For Charges

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—Government attorneys today hoped to complete their testimony in the trial of six persons charged with conspiring to defraud the government on the $60,000 Mound City State Park W. P. A. project.

Assistant District Attorney Ray M. O'Donnell indicated the list of government witnesses was nearly exhausted after two filling station managers and additional truck drivers testified at yesterday's session.

The government alleges the accused men "promoted" a number of common laborers to the status of truck-owner-drivers and allegedly retained the difference in pay between the two classifications.

Those on trial are John Mossbarger, proprietor of the Clarksburg Motor Sales; Roy Sampson, park superintendent; Henry C. Wallenhorst, assistant field engineer; Harvey C. Cutright and Jerry Dennis, general superintendents and William M. Stauderman, foreman. The latter four are W. P. A. officials.

Fuel Man Called

Alonzo Saunders, Chillicothe, one of the gas station managers, testified that between June and August of 1936 he supplied gasoline and oil for trucks allegedly owned by Dennis. He said the fuel was supplied on credit on Dennis' account.

Paul Anderson, Chillicothe, former gas station proprietor, also testified he furnished gasoline and oil for "Dennis' trucks."

"Did you ever have any dealings with Dennis?" O'Donnell asked.

"Yes," Anderson replied. "In 1935 and 1936, Dennis said he had four or five trucks."

Anderson said he was paid twice a month and that the money was taken out of the pay check of Paul McCoy, 36, Sparksville. He testified he computed what McCoy should receive at the rate of 50 cents an hour, gave this amount to McCoy, and applied the remainder to the account. Any money left over, he said, was "picked up" by Dennis.

McCoy had testified earlier that he had been promoted from the status of laborer to that of owner-driver after Dennis had obtained a truck for him from Mossbarger's agency. He said the owner-driver pay was $1.35 an hour but that he received only 50 cents an hour of this the remainder being turned over to Dennis.

Mortgage Signed

McCoy said he signed a mortgage on the truck because he "was told to." Later, he said, he received notice from the finance company that payments were not being kept up. He said he turned the notice over to Dennis because "he was supposed to keep up the payments."

Howard Faye, Chillicothe, a W. P. A. worker, testified he was promoted from the rating of laborer to that of garageman. He testified he installed a heater in Wallenhorst's automobile under orders from other W. P. A. officials.

"Why did you do work on privately-owned cars?" O'Donnell asked.

"Because I was told to by my superiors," he replied.

He alleged that he was warned to stop working on private cars when a certain official approached.

Everett Davis, Chillicothe, Negro W. P. A. worker, testified he washed automobiles belonging to Sampson, Wallenhorst, Cutright and Stauderman during working hours.

"Who paid you for this work?" O'Donnell asked.

"No one—except W. P. A.," Davis replied.

"Why did you wash the cars?" the district attorney asked.

"Because I was told to," Davis said.

Elvis Coder, Chillicothe, testified Sampson permitted him to use his credit at a finance company to purchase a truck for use on the project.

Colorful Hat of Big Bill Thompson Back in Ring as He Maps Campaign To Run for Mayor of Chicago Again

Undaunted by Defeat for Governor's Chair in 1936, Veteran Republican Craves Publicity as He Seeks to Take Advantage of Friction in Kelly Regime

CHICAGO, Jan. 14—Barkis was willin', but not as perennially willin' as former Mayor William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson of Chicago. Yes, Big Bill is willin' to run for mayor of the Windy City once more, following what he terms the insistence of his friends that he return to the political arena from which he emerged scarred but unbowed in 1933. More recently he made an unsuccessful bid for the Illinois gubernatorial chair in 1936, as a third party candidate seeking the favor of the followers of Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin.

More Familiar Ground

In 1939, however, Big Bill will be back in the fray that he knows best, in surroundings that enabled him to stage such a miraculous comeback after a supposedly inglorious defeat in 1925. In Chicago, he issued diatribes against the late King George, upset the school system at will, constructed bridges, boulevards and schools to his heart's content, and twice built up wrecked political machines.

All this Big Bill has done, and can do again, he has confided to "intimates" who are not averse to telling their confidences to the newspapers, which, friend or foe, always give Thompson his share of large, black headlines.

In fact, Thompson proudly asserts it has been newspaper enmity of the sort that would wear out a less experienced politician, that has kept him in the public limelight for more than 25 years in Chicago and Cook county.

Always alert to swift-moving political developments, Thompson now views an opportunity to lay his lines for 1939, which, though more than just around the corner, has been emblazoned in news stories for months as a result of newspaper and intra-party opposition to the Kelly-Nash Democratic machine now in power in Chicago.

Tables Turned

When the opposing party started fighting in its own ranks, Thompson subtly took advantage of the situation. Whereas Mayor Edward J. Kelly was drafted to take the place of the late Mayor Anton J. Cermak, who in turn had been elected on a landslide of popularity to give Chicago "a decent city administration for the 1933 World's fair", Kelly now finds himself on the receiving end of a "decency" campaign that will culminate in the next mayoralty election.

For, as irony would have it, Kelly's "saving" of Chicago in its world fair year now threatens to be the boomerang which will return to smite him. As deposed mayor, Big Bill Thompson cries for a return to the "good old days". They used to throw mud at Thompson and his cohorts, back in the dizzy twenties, because of the spurge of construction, padded payrolls and 100 percent Republican rule. Since 1933, however, a Republican in the city hall has been rarer than a dodo. The city has seen, heard and smelled nothing but machine Democratic politics since then, and Thompson believes he should ride on the crest of the wave that may put Republicanism back in power, perhaps to receive what he terms, sometimes without contradiction, the days of "easy money".

Big Bill's Attack

Thompson will ask what boulevards and schools have been built since he was ousted as mayor by "Tony" Cermak.

He will reply in his bellowing Hit-King-George style, before you can answer him, yes, there have been improvements, but they have been partly financed by PWA, WPA and RFC money. In the good old days, voters will be told, "Big Bill financed his improvements without running to Washington like a pauperized poor relation."

Of course, there will be rebuttals about the city's credit following the Thompson bond-issuing orgies of the twenties, but the public has a short memory; jobs are needed now as much as a decade ago and Thompson, always terming himself a sponsor of the downtrodden, will not be slow to cash in on that human factor.

He's a Showman

The Democrats who tossed Big Bill out of the city hall in 1933 will not have the same deadly ammunition for the next campaign, if Thompson's hat is in the ring. For in his outspoken way, to the accompaniment of downtown parades and delicate microphones which will give his personality a new touch, he will deftly refer to the pot calling the kettle black.

He will be able to quote his long-time newspaper enemies on the shortcomings of the present Democratic regime which in 1933 was to "save Chicago's decency"; on the charges of graft and corruption in the school system as well as in the more familiar city hall; on the prevalence of gambling; and on the squabble for patronage among jealous Democratic chiefs.

With such a setup in prospect, it is no wonder that the ambitions of yesterday should be stirring again in the Thompson breast. He is older by five years, but as mentally alert to a "ripe" situation as ever.

"Just Say Something"

And, as always, he insures the flood of publicity that follows his blatant comings and goings by telling the newspaper reporters: "I don't care what your sheets say about me, boys, just as long as they say something!"

This time, however, Big Bill will have to beat his tom-toms at the expense of someone else, inasmuch as King George V of England lies in Westminster Abbey.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

The following questions are those which have actually been asked Mr. Ries in the past week either mail, by telephone or personally at meetings. You too can have your questions answered by writing to this newspaper or direct to Mr. Ries, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

QUESTION: We would like to get a qualified speaker for our garden club meeting for the fourth Friday of March. Will you please tell us who is available from your department and give us his qualifications, fee expected, etc.

ANSWER: The Extension Specialists of the Agricultural Extension Service schedule meetings only through the local county agricultural agents. Since this work is state and federal supported, there is no charge for their services. However, with the many garden clubs in the state it is not possible to furnish speakers for individual clubs since but a limited amount of time is available for each county. May I suggest that you consult your local county agricultural agent who will be more than glad to cooperate with you in planning a meeting with the specialist. This meeting would have to be open to the public and advertised as such.

Last week I was asked for information in regard to cactus. I have just received the following information which may be of interest to cactus and succulent enthusiasts. There is a mid-west Cactus and Succulents Society with Mrs. Flora N. Trapp, 7946 Grace Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, secretary-treasurer of the Cleveland district, and Mr. C. R. Cole, 1797 Taft Road, Cincinnati, secretary-treasurer of the Cincinnati district. Both these people will be glad to give you information on this organization.

QUESTION: I have been admiring the evergreen English ivy growing in various yards and cemeteries throughout the state these past two months. I would like to know whether I could use it in my own yard?

ANSWER: The English ivy is satisfactory in the southern half of Ohio when grown on the east or north side of a building. When grown on the south or west it will be very likely to be injured during the winter. Throughout practically all of Ohio, the English ivy is satisfactory as a ground cover plant when grown in at least partial shade. If put out in the sun it is likely to sun-scan. You will find that the variety baltica is slightly harder than the ordinary English ivy. It has somewhat smaller leaves but otherwise is essentially the same.

QUESTION: Where may I obtain a list of the garden meetings sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service here in Ohio?

ANSWER: Your local county agricultural agent will always be able to tell you what meetings we have planned to be held in your county. In addition to this the GARDEN CLUB NEWS LETTER which may be obtained through my office, lists all the meetings held each month.

QUESTION: The elm trees in my yard are growing too tall. When should I cut the tops out of them, and if I cut the tops out, what sort of paint should I use to treat the wounds?

ANSWER: Unfortunately, the common practice of cutting the tops out of trees is not one to be recommended. Although the height of a tree may be somewhat lessened by the removal of some of the more upright branches, when any large branch is cut off a wound is left that can never heal, but which eventually, no matter what treatment is used, will decay. This decay will slowly but surely extend down the branch into the trunk of the tree. In the case of elms and the better shade trees, I do not feel that you need have any worry because they are tall. In the case of soft maples and Chinese elms, there is a danger because of their extremely soft, brittle wood. In this case my recommendation would be that some more permanent trees be

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

The following questions are those which have actually been asked Mr. Ries in the past week either mail, by telephone or personally at meetings. You too can have your questions answered by writing to this newspaper or direct to Mr. Ries, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

QUESTION: We would like to get a qualified speaker for our garden club meeting for the fourth Friday of March. Will you please tell us who is available from your department and give us his qualifications, fee expected, etc.

ANSWER: The Extension Specialists of the Agricultural Extension Service schedule meetings only through the local county agricultural agents. Since this work is state and federal supported, there is no charge for their services.

However, with the many garden clubs in the state it is not possible to furnish speakers for individual clubs since but a limited amount of time is available for each county. May I suggest that you consult your local county agricultural agent who will be more than glad to cooperate with you in planning a meeting with the specialist. This meeting would have to be open to the public and advertised as such.

Last week I was asked for information in regard to cactus. I have just received the following information which may be of interest to cactus and succulent enthusiasts. There is a mid-west Cactus and Succulents Society with Mrs. Flora N. Trapp, 7946 Grace Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, secretary-treasurer of the Cleveland district, and Mr. C. R. Cole, 1797 Taft Road, Cincinnati, secretary-treasurer of the Cincinnati district. Both these people will be glad to give you information on this organization.

QUESTION: I have been admiring the evergreen English ivy growing in various yards and cemeteries throughout the state these past two months. I would like to know whether I could use it in my own yard?

ANSWER: The English ivy is satisfactory in the southern half of Ohio when grown on the east or north side of a building. When grown on the south or west it will be very likely to be injured during the winter. Throughout practically all of Ohio, the English ivy is satisfactory as a ground cover plant when grown in at least partial shade. If put out in the sun it is likely to sun-scald. You will find that the variety baltica is slightly harder than the ordinary English ivy. It has somewhat smaller leaves but otherwise is essentially the same.

QUESTION: Where may I obtain a list of the garden meetings sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service here in Ohio?

ANSWER: Your local county agricultural agent will always be able to tell you what meetings we have planned to be held in your county. In addition to this the GARDEN CLUB NEWS LETTER which may be obtained through my office, lists all the meetings held each month.

QUESTION: The elm trees in my yard are growing too tall. When should I cut the tops out of them, and if I cut the tops out, what sort of paint should I use to treat the wounds?

ANSWER: Unfortunately, the common practice of cutting the tops out of trees is not one to be recommended. Although the height of a tree may be somewhat lessened by the removal of some of the more upright branches, when any large branch is cut off a wound is left that can never heal, but which eventually, no matter what treatment is used, will decay. This decay will slowly but surely extend down the branch into the trunk of the tree. In the case of elms and the better shade trees, I do not feel that you need have any worry because they are tall. In the case of soft maples and Chinese elms, there is a danger because of their extremely soft, brittle wood. In this case my recommendation would be that some more permanent trees be planted somewhere near them with the idea of eventually replacing them if there is danger that they may injure your house in a wind storm. In painting tree wounds, you will find that you can buy especially prepared tree paints for this purpose. If you do not want to do this you may use asphalt varnish or any good house paint. With all these paints it is an excellent idea to paint only to within one-quarter inch of the live bark to prevent any possible injury of the growing tissue which is just beneath the bark.

QUESTION: I wish to grow an evergreen vine on the south side of my house and understand the evergreen ivy is not hardy in such a situation. What would you suggest?

ANSWER: I would suggest that you use the evergreen winter-creeper euonymus radicans. There are several varieties of this. The fastest growing one being the variety colorata which has a reddish cast to the leaves during the winter.

QUESTION: My nurseryman advised me to plant a flowering almond for a hedge along the side of my yard. What do you think of this plant?

ANSWER: I cannot recommend the flowering almond for two or three reasons, the main one being that it is very susceptible to a blight which of course is highly undesirable in any hedge. Another objection would be that if you get it on its own roots it is going to sucker rather badly, whereas if you get a grafted plant, usually grafted on wild plum, it is apt to be too leggy at the bottom to make a satisfactory hedge. You will also have the difficulty of the wild plum suckering rather badly. For a low hedge, I would suggest that you use Japanese barberry or its new upright form, called columberry, the Regal privet, or the Alpine current. There are many other shrubs that you might use which will also give satisfactory results.

ST. LOUIS (UP)—Police Judge James F. Nagle dismissed a traffic charge because the arresting officer had written "Europe" as the birthplace of the defendant. The term, he said, was too vague and indefinite.

"Well, where were you born," Judge Nagle asked the defendant after the case was dismissed.

"In Czechoslovakia, judge."

"Didn't you tell that to the arresting officer?"

"Sure I did," the defendant replied. "But he couldn't spell it. I couldn't either, so he made it Europe."

"WELFARE AT HEART"

President Seeks Successor To Sutherland

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Sen. Vic Donahey, D., O., today endorsed U. S. Circuit Judge Florence E. Allen of Ohio as successor to retiring associate Judge George Sutherland of the Supreme court.

Donahey said that Miss Allen had an excellent record as a judge and would be an admirable successor to Sutherland. Earlier this week it was disclosed that President Roosevelt was considering the advisability of appointing a woman to the post and had mentioned Miss Allen as a possibility although it was believed the nomination would go to a man.

Donahey said that Miss Allen has "the welfare of the country at heart," and has a good background for the appointment.

STATE BAR MAY SEEK MARRIAGE CODE REVISIONS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—The Ohio State Bar Association, in mid-winter convention here Jan. 27-29, may be asked to consider changes in the state's marriage code as formulated by the association's committee on judicial administration and legal reforms.

Under the proposals, a doctor's certificate stating that both applicants are free from "venereal diseases, epilepsy, feeble mindedness and insanity" would be required of couples who wish to be married in Ohio. The proposed revisions would be subject to approval by the bar association and through legal enactments by the Ohio general assembly.

Another recommendation would raise the marriage age from 16 to 20 years for men and from 18 to 18 years for women, with parental consent to be required in all cases where applicants are under 21 years of age.

Can you suggest an unusual main dish using salmon?

Have you tried a "North Coast Salmon Bake"? We suggest it for variety in meals.

North Coast Salmon Bake

- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 2 Tbsp. chopped parsley
- 2 Tbsp. melted butter
- Small pkg. potato chips

My family never tires of fudge cake, but I'm sure my favorite recipe can be improved upon. Can you recommend a light fudge cake I might try?

This cake is so delicate it melts in your mouth. It is rich in flavor, and as good as it can be. I sincerely hope you like it.

Fudge Cake

- 1/4 C. shortening
- 2 sq. unsweetened chocolate
- 1 C. water
- 1 C. sugar
- 1 C. flour
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 egg
- 1/2 tsp. baking soda
- 1/4 C. sour milk or buttermilk
- 1 tsp. vanilla

Melt shortening in top of double boiler, add chocolate which has been cut into small pieces. When chocolate is melted, add water and sugar, stir until blended, remove from heat, and allow to cool thoroughly. Sift flour, measure, add salt and baking powder, sift together. When chocolate mixture is cool add unbeaten egg, mix well. Then add sifted dry ingredients, blend well. Dissolve soda in sour milk, buttermilk and add to batter. Pour into greased pan 8x8x2 and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 to 35 minutes. Top with thick Chocolate Fudge Frosting.

- 1 Tbsp. butter
- 1 Tbsp. light corn syrup

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Timely as the annual choice of an All-American eleven, yet endowed with romance as old as time, "Navy Blue and Gold" brings to the screen of the Cliftona Theatre tonight a thrilling story of love and football at the Annapolis Academy.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent a company to film much of the scenery on the picturesque grounds in Maryland. Other sequences were photographed at the "amous Pasadena Rose Bowl. The picture, accordingly, bears all the marks of authenticity and carries an impressive story.

The cast is headed by Robert Young, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice, Billie Burke, and Tom Brown, with Samuel S. Hinds, Paul Kelly, and Barnett Parker in important supporting roles. Sam Wood, one of Hollywood's most accomplished directors, achieved enviable results with the original novel by George Bruce.

GAS CO. DENIED RATE INCREASE OF SEVEN CENTS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—

The State Public Utilities Commission today denied an increase of seven cents per 1,000 cubic feet for about 20,000 customers of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

The increase sought by the company would have meant $144,000 a year added to the consumer's bills. Those involved in the rate increase request were consumers of the old Federal Gas & Fuel Co. who have been paying 48 cents 1,000 cubic feet while the 60,000 customers of the old Columbus Gas & Fuel Co. have been paying 55 cents for three years.

Both of these companies are now merged with the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. but only the Columbus gas carried on a fight several years ago which won a seven-cent hike.

MURDER, SUICIDE THEORY HEARD IN W. VIRGINIA

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Jan. 14—(UP)—

Police today described a tragedy in which a prominent woman church leader and an insurance agent were found shot to death in a mansion in Cameron, southwest of here, as murder and suicide.

The victims were Mrs. Buelah Cooper, 50, wealthy widow of Dr. James E. Cooper, and O. J. Prunty, Cameron insurance agent, who were found dead in the residence yesterday.

Police said Prunty had been living at the Cooper home for the past year. They believed Prunty first shot Mrs. Cooper then turned the gun on himself. Both were dead when the shooting was discovered.

Mrs. Cooper's husband was killed in a railroad accident about four years ago. They had no children.

The Bowie collection of small firearms on exhibit at Ft. McHenry National park, Baltimore, Md., is rated as the finest small firearms collection extant.

James Courtright Takes Aviation Post in West

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Phone Ashville 79

James Courtright, who has been assisting with the work at the Courtright dairy west of town, has set the date of his leaving for Los Angeles as of January 28. His work there will be that of an air-plane mechanic and possibly later, an aviator.

Ashville Visitor at Shafer's
Edward Yingling, a nephew of Reed Shafer, manager of the local creamery, is here on a visit to his uncle. He is an experienced aviator having seen service in the World War. Thinks traveling by plane is safer than the automobile. But just in case one falls to earth, you are out to stay. His home town is Muncie, Ind. And speaking of war, he said the next one will be fought from the air.

Ashville Pobot Moving Mill
Joseph Pobot, who has operated a saw mill here for quite a while, getting out mainly thousands of wood stocks for commercial manufacturing concerns, specializing in highway grade stakes, is removing his mill to the Ervin Young farm in Fairfield county where there is much sawing to do. Mr. Pobot, with his handicap of having two artificial legs, deserves very much credit for his will to carry on.

Ashville Party Returns Home
Harry Margulis and party have returned home from California. The round trip distance, Harry said, was 6000 miles. Mrs. Davidson remained there for a longer visit. Many points in California were visited. They attended the Rose Bowl parade at Pasadena.

Ashville Hatcheries Ready
Had an inquiry the other day for a chick brooder and the party who had one for sale said it was a coal heater and this was what the purchaser did not want. Said she was in the market for a brooder but it must be of the oil variety. Hatcheries are now getting into operation and any time now hundreds of chicks will be received at the local postoffice.

A "little red school house gang" all happened in at "Headquarters" (Tom's) Thursday afternoon, the individuals being Earl Huffman, Walden Plum, Sennet Cryder, Tom Acord and your scribe, all red school hangers. It was settled for a fact that the teaching at the little red country school was more thorough than that the kiddies are getting in the grades today. There was no getting away from your lesson, you simply had to know it, or else. Believe it or not we did have to work.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Timely as the annual choice of an All-American eleven, yet endowed with romance as old as time, "Navy Blue and Gold" brings to the screen of the Cliftona Theatre tonight a thrilling story of love and football at the Annapolis Academy.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent a company to film much of the scenery on the picturesque grounds in Maryland. Other sequences were photographed at the famous Pasadena Rose Bowl. The picture, accordingly, bears all the marks of authenticity and carries an impressive story.

The cast is headed by Robert Young, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice, Billie Burke, and Tom Brown, with Samuel S. Hinds, Paul Kelly, and Barnett Parker in important supporting roles. Sam Wood, one of Hollywood's most accomplished directors, achieved enviable results with the original novel by George Bruce.

Harold Bell Wright's newest action adventure, "Western Gold," Twentieth Century-Fox release which opens Saturday at the Grand Theatre, brings to the screen an historical locale seldom if ever before, depicted in a motion picture.

GAS CO. DENIED RATE INCREASE OF SEVEN CENTS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—The State Public Utilities Commission today denied an increase of seven cents per 1,000 cubic feet for about 20,000 customers of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

The increase sought by the company would have meant $144,000 a year added to the consumer's bills. Those involved in the rate increase request were consumers of the old Federal Gas & Fuel Co. who have been paying 48 cents 1,000 cubic feet while the 60,000 customers of the old Columbus Gas & Fuel Co. have been paying 55 cents for three years.

Both of these companies are now merged with the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. but only the Columbus gas carried on a fight several years ago which won a seven-cent hike.

MURDER, SUICIDE THEORY HEARD IN W. VIRGINIA

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Jan. 14—(UP)—Police today described a tragedy in which a prominent woman church leader and an insurance agent were found shot to death in a mansion in Cameron, southwest of here, as murder and suicide.

The victims were Mrs. Buelah Cooper, 50, wealthy widow of Dr. James E. Cooper, and O. J. Prunty, Cameron insurance agent, who were found dead in the residence yesterday.

Police said Prunty had been living at the Cooper home for the past year. They believed Prunty first shot Mrs. Cooper then turned the gun on himself. Both were dead when the shooting was discovered.

Mrs. Cooper's husband was killed in a railroad accident about four years ago. They had no children.

The Bowie collection of small firearms on exhibit at Ft. McHenry National park, Baltimore, Md., is rated as the finest small fire-arms collection extant.

Grange Master Sees Work Aid In Program

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14 — (UP)—National Grange Master L. J. Taber today revealed that the national organization is working for a $50,000,000 increase in the federal appropriation for rural electrification.

Speaking before a group of grange members and officials, representing a dozen Ohio counties, Taber described efforts being made by grange legislative agents in Washington to obtain an increase in the electrification appropriation from the present figure of $30,000,000 to $80,000,000.

Such an increase, Taber contended, would not be at variance with the grange's balanced-budget policy, because, he declared, "for every dollar loaned for R. E. building projects, nine dollars will go into circulation to pay for materials, supplies, appliances, labor and similar items."

The increased demand for labor and materials produced by a widespread program of electrification would accomplish the same results as work relief agencies, he believes.

The conference which Taber addressed here yesterday was the first of a series of seven grange officer and worker meetings to be held in Columbus, Cambridge, Akron, Jackson, Wilmington, Sidney and Findlay during the coming week.

Marion Davies' Admirer Gives Her His Estate

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14—(UP)—Succeeding in death what he had attempted in vain for more than two decades of his life, Clark Alvard at last gained the attention today of Miss Marion Davies, the woman he loved—from afar.

He adopted the simple expedient of leaving the major portion of his small estate to her, and then clinched his plans by naming her as one of the executors. Her share is approximately $10,000.

Miss Davies, who weekly is earning that same sum at Warner brothers for doing nothing while the experts ponder her movie future, must help settle the affairs of her unknown lover in court and so will have stamped indelibly on her mind—as he had planned it eight years ago—the fact that Clark loved her, even unto death.

In 1916, Alvard was a middle aged gold prospector in the Nevada desert. He trudged 40 miles into Las Vegas one Saturday to see a movie. The picture happened to be the first that Miss Davies made. Alvard thought she was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen. He wrote her a letter telling her so.

He got no reply, but that did not halt his devotion to the young and willowy woman whose shadow had captured his heart. Through the years he made it a point, wherever he was, to see every picture in which Miss Davies appeared.

Many Letters Written From his shack in the wilderness he wrote her letters. He asked for autographed photographs. He told of his admiration for her work and even of his love for herself. He expressed a desire to meet her.

For years he never received a reply. Then, when the movie studios began hiring public relations directors, he got mimeographed notes saying that Miss Davies, who couldn't possibly have read the thousands of letters sent her, appreciated his interest. The notes usually added that if he would send a quarter, a picture of her would be forthcoming. Even this did not discourage Alvard. He sent his 25 cents and he obtained his picture, by second-class mail. No word accompanied it from woman he idolized, not even an autograph.

As the years passed, Alvard's hair grayed, but his passion for Miss Davies continued. He became postmaster and general storekeeper in the tiny mining camp of Nelson, 20 miles from Las Vegas, and still he wrote Miss Davies letters, always respectful, even adoring. She never replied.

In 1930 he wrote his will with a hand more used to the pick than the pen. He scrawled these words: "I give and bequeath to my beloved Marion Davies all my property, both real and personal, including 510,000 shares of South Eastern mining company stocks of El Dorado canyon, Nev., she at all times and her heirs to have all full voting power of the above shares."

He told no one about his last testament, not even his beloved. Then he began to worry, not only about his relations, but about the fact that perhaps Miss Davies might never hear of him, despite his gift. So he added a codicil: "I desire 45 percent of my estate to be divided among my legal heirs, the rest to go according to my last will. I appoint John S. Sartain and Leo McNamee and Marion Davies as executors of this will, to act without bond."

To this document he attached her 25 cent photograph.

Miss Davies made her final picture last May. Alvard saw it. He read reports of her rumored retirement from the screen. He even wrote her urging her not to do so.

Will Probated He died the other day in a Las Vegas hospital of an accumulation of ailments. His will was filed for probate and as he had planned for so long—Miss Davies, in person, was informed of the death of the man who loved her.

"I never met Mr. Alvard," she said. "He wrote several letters for photographs, which were sent him in due course. He always was very kind and complimentary. I imagine I shall give my share of his estate to charity—in his name."

A LETTER

January 14th, 1938

An Open Letter From An Old Friend

To my Friends of this Community:—

There is much in the days news concerning cooperation. Its benefits are manifold. The lack of it increases and complicates our daily problems.

We think that our business is a good example of cooperation. With the support of our friends and neighbors, we have grown and progressed. With your cooperation we have been able to keep pace with the most modern and scientific methods developed in our particular industry. As a further result of such loyal patronage there is now produced, nowhere in the land, a finer line of baked goods than that served to you by your own local enterprise.

But pause for a moment and consider this—our entire community has come a long way in the years since we started our business. That progress has been the result of unstinted effort on the part of everyone. A great part of all that we have gained in the commercial dealings with each other has gone back into our own community to make it a better place in which to live.

So the next time you buy baked goods—just stop and remember that you're dealing with a friend who has the same interests as yourself — and your cooperation alone will determine how much we can give back to ourselves.

TABER TO SEEK MORE CASH FOR FARM PROJECT

Fifty Millions In Added Money Requested For Electrification

MEETINGS ON SCHEDULE

Grange Master Sees Work Aid In Program

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — National Grange Master L. J. Taber today revealed that the national organization is working for a $50,000,000 increase in the federal appropriation for rural electrification.

Speaking before a group of grange members and officials, representing a dozen Ohio counties, Taber described efforts being made by grange legislative agents in Washington to obtain an increase in the electrification appropriation from the present figure of $30,000,000 to $80,000,000.

Such an increase, Taber contended, would not be at variance with the grange's balanced-budget policy, because, he declared, "for every dollar loaned for R.E. building projects, nine dollars will go into circulation to pay for materials, supplies, appliances, labor and similar items."

The increased demand for labor and materials produced by a widespread program of electrification would accomplish the same results as work relief agencies, he believes.

The conference which Taber addressed here yesterday was the first of a series of seven grange officer and worker meetings to be held in Columbus, Cambridge, Akron, Jackson, Wilmington, Sidney and Findlay during the coming week.

Marion Davies' Admirer Gives Her His Estate

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14—(UP)—Succeeding in death what he had attempted in vain for more than two decades of his life, Clark Alvard at last gained the attention today of Miss Marion Davies, the woman he loved—from afar.

He adopted the simple expedient of leaving the major portion of his small estate to her, and then clinched his plans by naming her as one of the executors. Her share is approximately $10,000.

Miss Davies, who weekly is earning that same sum at Warner brothers for doing nothing while the experts ponder her movie future, must help settle the affairs of her unknown lover in court and so will have stamped indelibly on her mind—as he had planned it eight years ago—the fact that Clark loved her, even unto death.

In 1916, Alvard was a middle aged gold prospector in the Nevada desert. He trudged 40 miles into Las Vegas one Saturday to see a movie. The picture happened to be the first that Miss Davies made. Alvard thought she was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen. He wrote her a letter telling her so.

He got no reply, but that did not halt his devotion to the young and willowy woman whose shadow had captured his heart. Through the years he made it a point, wherever he was, to see every picture in which Miss Davies appeared.

Many Letters Written From his shack in the wilderness he wrote her letters. He asked for autographed photographs. He told of his admiration for her work and even of his love for herself. He expressed a desire to meet her.

For years he never received a reply. Then, when the movie studios began hiring public relations directors, he got mimeographed notes saying that Miss Davies, who couldn't possibly have read the thousands of letters sent her, appreciated his interest. The notes usually added that if he would send a quarter, a picture of her would be forthcoming. Even this did not discourage Alvard.

He sent his 25 cents and he obtained his picture, by second-class mail. No word accompanied it from woman he idolized, not even an autograph.

As the years passed, Alvard's hair grayed, but his passion for Miss Davies continued. He became postmaster and general storekeeper in the tiny mining camp of Nelson, 20 miles from Las Vegas, and still he wrote Miss Davies letters, always respectful, even adoring. She never replied.

In 1930 he wrote his will with a hand more used to the pick than the pen. He scrawled these words: "I give and bequeath to my beloved Marion Davies all my property, both real and personal, including 510,000 shares of South Eastern mining company stocks of El Dorado canyon, Nev., she at all times and her heirs to have all full voting power of the above shares."

He told no one about his last testament, not even his beloved. Then he began to worry, not only about his relations, but about the fact that perhaps Miss Davies might never hear of him, despite his gift. So he added a codicil: "I desire 45 percent of my estate to be divided among my legal heirs, the rest to go according to my last will. I appoint John S. Sartain and Leo McNamee and Marion Davies as executors of this will, to act without bond."

To this document he attached her 25 cent photograph.

Miss Davies made her final picture last May. Alvard saw it. He read reports of her rumored retirement from the screen. He even wrote her urging her not to do so.

Will Probated He died the other day in a Las Vegas hospital of an accumulation of ailments. His will was filed for probate and as he had planned for so long—Miss Davies, in person, was informed of the death of the man who loved her.

"I never met Mr. Alvard," she said. "He wrote several letters for photographs, which were sent him in due course. He always was very kind and complimentary. I imagine I shall give my share of his estate to charity—in his name."

An Open Letter From An Old Friend

To my Friends of this Community:—

There is much in the days news concerning cooperation. Its benefits are manifold. The lack of it increases and complicates our daily problems.

We think that our business is a good example of cooperation. With the support of our friends and neighbors, we have grown and progressed. With your cooperation we have been able to keep pace with the most modern and scientific methods developed in our particular industry. As a further result of such loyal patronage there is now produced, nowhere in the land, a finer line of baked goods than that served to you by your own local enterprise.

But pause for a moment and consider this—our entire community has come a long way in the years since we started our business. That progress has been the result of unstinted effort on the part of everyone. A great part of all that we have gained in the commercial dealings with each other has gone back into our own community to make it a better place in which to live.

So the next time you buy baked goods—just stop and remember that you're dealing with a friend who has the same interests as yourself — and your cooperation alone will determine how much we can give back to ourselves.

OPEN LETTERS

TO CITY COUNCIL

MEMBERS: Last year numerous efforts were made to interest council in making appropriations for more traffic lights at dangerous intersections in our city. The retiring councilmen took no action on the question. Since Mayor Cady and the police department are making an effort to clear up traffic conditions in Circleville, council should cooperate and add more lights to the traffic system. There should be lights on Franklin street at Pickaway and Washington, at Watt and Pickaway, High and Scioto, and others. Money spent on traffic lights would be insurance on the lives and health of Circleville citizens. Another matter the retiring council disregarded was an ordinance on bill passing. Circleville is one of the few cities in central Ohio that has no restrictions on this nuisance. If councilmen discuss the proposition with a few of their neighbors they will soon learn the opinions of Circleville residents on the bill-passing proposition.

TO CONSERVATIONISTS

FRIENDS: In Fayette county easements are being obtained from farm owners for a series of dams for water conservation and fish propagation to be built during the next year or two. Plans call for from 15 to 30 small dams in the county, and possibly one that will require army engineers to survey before plans for construction are completed. These dams are of great value to rural residents in maintaining the water level as well as increasing fishing facilities. A plan for construction of a series of small dams in this county was considered at one time and dropped after some sportsmen experienced difficulty in obtaining easements. Pickaway county conservationists would be wise if they made an effort to obtain this type of work for this district.

TO DOG OWNERS

FRIENDS: Some of you are going to be caught in a last-minute rush for dog tags. To date approximately 900 tags have been sold and there are about 3,450 dogs in Pickaway county. Under the law county officials must assess a $1 penalty for tags purchased after Jan. 20.
CIRCUITEER.

TO BANK PRESIDENTS

EXECUTIVES: George Foresman, O. S. Howard, Clark Will, and John C. Goeller, presidents of Circleville's four fine banking institutions, deserve the plaudits of all residents of Circleville and community on their re-election by their respective boards of directors. The strength of the Circleville banks was proved during the crisis of a few years ago, remembered by everyone. The splendid management of the institutions was proved at that time when all weathered the storm in perfect condition, thus retaining the faith their patrons and the entire community had placed in them. Annual reports, printed recently, showed all banks in excellent shape. Much of the credit is due to the men who direct the policies of the financial houses.

CIRCUITEER.

TO RURAL FOLK

FARMERS: The first of the series of eight county community institutes to be presented in the county opened Friday in Saltcreek and Scioto townships. Attendance at the institutes last year totalled 9,078 persons. There are many residents of the various communities who do not realize the value of these institutes. They create friendship in the communities and closer cooperation among residents. The programs are entertaining and educational. Officials have obtained outstanding speakers this year and have arranged programs that should interest every person of the community. Attend the institute at your earliest convenience.
CIRCUITEER.

TO BOARD OF HEALTH

MEMBERS: Should Circleville have a physician for a city health commissioner? This question has been discussed numerous times, and no definite action has ever been taken. Mrs. Blanche Kellogg, health nurse, is to be congratulated for the work she has accomplished. I believe this important department of our city is handicapped in not having a physician at its head. Many health programs are not presented in Circleville due to the fact our health officer has not been a doctor. It would be necessary to employ a physician to conduct them. The accomplishments of our county health office show the advantages of having a physician as the health commissioner. I believe this matter deserves serious consideration by the board.
CIRCUITEER.

TO PEACE OFFICERS

FRIENDS: When Mayor Cady called you together this week to discuss some of the problems facing the city, he sounded one of the keynotes of his administration when he urged cooperation of all law enforcement bodies. Circleville has a splendid police force, and the county has an outstanding sheriff's department. The two combined and working hand in hand should make this community one of the finest from a law enforcement and crime prevention standpoint in the state. Mayor Cady's order that petty difficulties should be put aside should be heeded, and I believe that it will be.
CIRCUITEER.

TO EASTERN STAR

FOLK: Forty years of valuable service in a community were recounted this week when your order held a splendid meeting in the Masonic temple. The Eastern Star organization of Circleville, with its many activities, has become one of the outstanding chapters in Ohio, a place that is justly deserved. I hope your organization many more years of success.

World At A Glance

One must admit that Benito Mussolini has plenty of justification for his attitude of hilarity toward the United States in connection with congress' predominant reaction to Representative Louis Ludlow's proposed constitutional amendment calling for a popular vote in support of an American declaration of war against any foreign power.

At least, I suppose it was Il Duce himself who gave us the ha-ha. The recent article, making fun of us, appeared in his personal newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia, and good judges of his literary style say that evidently he wrote it. He generally is given credit for having done so anyway. And when I say credit I mean "credit". It was a workmanlike editorial job, whoever did it.

THE LUDLOW AMENDMENT

It is like this: As we all know, the president of the United States cannot declare war, but we also know that, by his management of foreign affairs, he can create such a situation that war is unescapable. Then it is up to congress to do the actual declaring. The voters have nothing to say about it. That is constitutional. Congressman Ludlow of Indiana seeks to amend the constitution so as to deny this power to congress without a popularly affirmative vote. That is, not unless we physically are invaded or attacked, requiring instant action.

HOW "UNDEMOCRATIC"?

Objection to this process is based, partly, upon the contention that, while we were conducting our plebiscite, the enemy would be licking the tar out of us.

It is an objection which does not seem to hold good, considering that we could begin fighting instantly, if actually invaded or attacked. But waive that point. Objectors complain that the Ludlow program would be undemocratic. It might be impractical. Yet how could it be undemocratic?

MUSSOLINI'S VIEW

The notion is what excites Premier Mussolini's risibilities. What makes HIM laugh is the suggestion that anyone could assume that it IS democratic. "Of course it isn't," he reasons. "Phooey!" in effect, says the Popolo d'Italia, "to democracy. That's what's the matter with it." "Democracies themselves are afraid of democracy in emergencies."

"When the supreme interests of a people are at stake even the most democratic governments take care not to trust the people's judgment."

UNASSAILABLE?

O. K. No opponent of the Ludlow amendment can answer that argument except by saying that, normally, he is a democrat, but, in emergencies, a Fascist. If you oppose Louis Ludlowism, in principal the Mussolini-istic doctrine is unassailable.

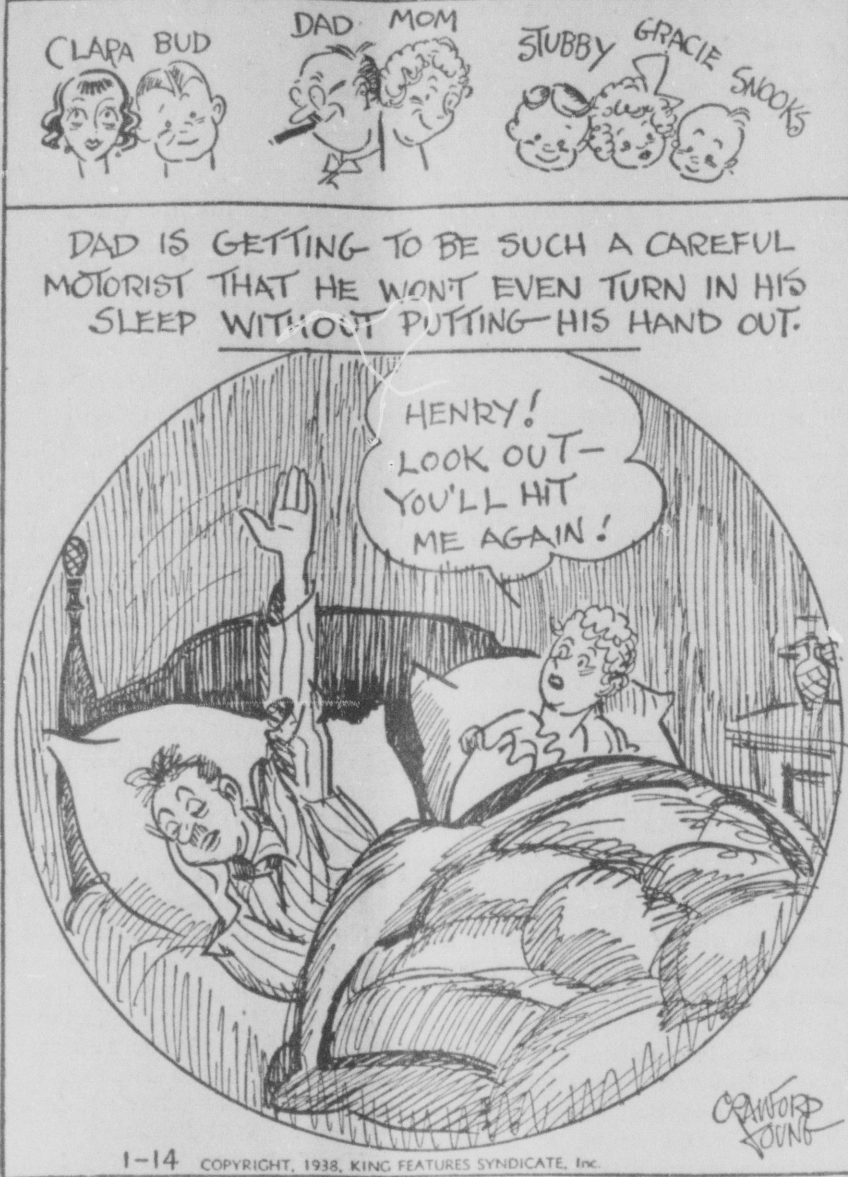

NEVER TESTED ON ISSUE

A qualification Some politicians maintain that our government is representative. If, they reason, our representatives declare war, that represents us.

In the main, if we elect a representative, we know upon what issue we elect him. But we do not often elect him upon a peace-or-war issue; that arises suddenly. It is an issue upon which he has not been tested.

He uses his own judgment. His constituency does not know which side he is on; he does not know which side his constituency is on. Is that representative? It looks queer to Benito Mussolini.

Folk Not "Safe at Home." Hazards Many

by LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE RED CROSS lists a number of "don'ts" for householders:
Don't leave toys on the staircase.
Don't open cans with a knife.
Don't turn on the light from the bathtub.
Don't leave your medicine chest open.
Don't smoke in bed.
Don't use a rocking chair for a ladder.
There are several others that apply more to summer than to winter.
These emphasize that "safe at home" is just a phrase. The home is almost as dangerous as the automobile.
I list them by request, but I am not sanguine that the warnings do much good. Even when people have a warning, there are plenty of people who will smoke in bed tonight immediately after reading this article. And there are even people on record who have set fire to the bed, and
Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.
Ten two weeks later set fire to the bed, and a month later set fire to the pillows on a chair, and then set fire to the bed again. Somebody once remarked,

CHAPTER 1
I CANNOT pretend that there was anything sinister in the atmosphere that evening. Nothing of the sort that is supposed to precede a crime. Nobody walked about looking furtive, no whispered quarrels were interrupted, no mysterious strangers lurked near the house. Although afterwards, as you may imagine, I went over the events of the day again and again in my mind, I could remember nothing which might have served as a warning, nothing at all extraordinary in anyone's behavior. That is why the thing came as such an abominable shock to me.
I remember, of course—I have good cause to remember—that we discussed crime over our cocktails. But we discussed it in general terms, and how could one have guessed that there was any relevance in the discussion? And I could not say for certain who had brought up the subject. Perhaps if I could have done so, it would have helped us later to understand. For that discussion was relevant, appallingly relevant, in a very special sense. As you shall see.
But at the time—well, at the Thurstons' week-end parties, crime might be discussed, or religion, politics, the cinema, or ghosts. Any topic of general interest which arose was sure to be pretty well thrashed out. That was the kind of party which the Thurstons gave, a party at which everyone talked a great deal, shouting opinions which he would afterward have denied, and trying to shout them as cleverly as possible. I do not mean that it was all rather self-conscious and airy, like those awful parties in London at which women with unpleasant breath advocate free love and nudism. But at the Thurstons' conversation was enjoyed, and not treated as a tiresome stop-gap between dinner and bridge.
Dr. Thurston himself was no conversationalist, though he enjoyed listening, and could put in an incentive phrase now and again. He was a big, bespectacled man, rather Teutonic in appearance, and in manner, too, for he showed a jolly German simplicity and sentimentality to everyone. He liked pressing his guests to food and drink and cigars, with booming emphasis. He had been the local doctor in that Sussex village, till he married, and although he no longer practiced he had kept on the house, because he liked it, and allowed the new practitioner to build afresh. It was understood that Mrs. Thurston had money, at all events they had been very well off since their marriage, and entertained a great deal.
She, too, was amiable, most amiable, but not very intelligent. Although I stayed with the Thurstons many times, and must have spent hours in the same room with Mary Thurston, I cannot recall a single sentence that she uttered. She was stout, and spent a great deal of money on her clothes, a big, blonde, rather painted woman, easy-going and quite unpretentious. I can see her clearly enough, even if I cannot remember words of hers, beaming round on us all, filling quite a wide armchair, giggling like a girl at flattery, obviously overflowing with kindness. "The Goddess of Plenty" someone once called her, aptly enough, for as a hostess, from the practical point of view, she was supreme. The food was really exquisite, the house beautifully kept, and Mrs. Thurston had that important gift—a memory for drinks. She was a good woman.
Whoever may have started discussing crime, it was Alec Norris who did most of the talking, though he pretended to be contemptuous of the topic.
"Crime?" he said. "Can't we talk about anything else? Don't we get enough of it in books and films? I'm sick to death of this crime, crime, crime, wherever you turn."
Dr. Thurston chuckled. He knew Norris, and knew why he spoke so bitterly. Norris was an unsuccessful writer of novels very different from murder mysteries—rather intense psychological books, with a good deal of sex in them. Dr. Thurston saw his chance of making Norris excited.
"But is it crime in those books?" he asked. "Crime as it really happens?"
Norris might have been a diver on a springboard. He hesitated for one moment, blinking at Thurston, then he plunged. "No. I'm damned if it is," he said. "Literary crime is all baffling mystery and startling clues. Whereas in real life, murder, for instance, nearly always turns out to be some sordid business of a strangled servant girl. There are only two kinds of murder which could baffle

You're Telling Me!

JAPANESE military experts are now working out a scheme whereby they would send messages during a battle in form of microscopic notes attached to bees. Looks as though someone is going to get stung.

Japan has gone a long way in our lifetime. It's a far cry from Madame Butterfly to Private Bum Bill Bee, army dispatch carrier.

One thing the Japanese high command probably has overlooked is that naturalists say that among all insects the bees are true Communists.

That being the case the Nipponese war lords may find that scrapping with the Chinese is as peaceful as a game of checkers compared with trying to put down a nation-wide mutiny in the hives. Meanwhile, American scientists are reported going ahead with experiments tending to change the home-life of queen bees. As though that were any of their buzziness!

A poet once said that the true music of the fields is that made by bees hovering over flowers. Sure, many's the time we've heard a whole swarm of them rendering a ditty that sounded just like "Hum, Sweet Hum."

Bugologists also claim that the worker bee has a greater homing instinct than the highly publicized pigeon. No wonder—the bee always goes home because that's where her honey is.

TO CITY COUNCIL

MEMBERS: Last year numerous efforts were made to interest council in making appropriations for more traffic lights at dangerous intersections in our city. The retiring councilmen took no action on the question. Since Mayor Cady and the police department are making an effort to clear up traffic conditions in Circleville, council should cooperate and add more lights to the traffic system. There should be lights on Franklin street at Pickaway and Washington, at Watt and Pickaway, High and Scioto, and others. Money spent on traffic lights would be insurance on the lives and health of Circleville citizens. Another matter the retiring council disregarded was an ordinance on bill passing. Circleville is one of the few cities in central Ohio that has no restrictions on this nuisance. If councilmen discuss the proposition with a few of their neighbors they will soon learn the opinions of Circleville residents on the bill-passing proposition.

TO CONSERVATIONISTS

FRIENDS: In Fayette county easements are being obtained from farm owners for a series of dams for water conservation and fish propagation to be built during the next year or two. Plans call for from 15 to 30 small dams in the county, and possibly one that will require army engineers to survey before plans for construction are completed. These dams are of great value to rural residents in maintaining the water level as well as increasing fishing facilities. A plan for construction of a series of small dams in this county was considered at one time and dropped after some sportsmen experienced difficulty in obtaining easements. Pickaway county conservationists would be wise if they made an effort to obtain this type of work for this district.

World At A Glance

One must admit that Benito Mussolini has plenty of justification for his attitude of hilarity toward the United States in connection with congress' predominant reaction to Representative Louis Ludlow's proposed constitutional amendment calling for a popular vote in support of an American declaration of war against any foreign power.

At least, I suppose it was Il Duce himself who gave us the haba. The recent article, making fun of us, appeared in his personal newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia, and good judges of his literary style say that evidently he wrote it.

He generally is given credit for having done so anyway. And when I say credit I mean "credit". It was a workmanlike editorial job, whoever did it.

THE LUDLOW AMENDMENT

It is like this

As we all know, the president of the United States cannot declare war, but we also know that, by his management of foreign affairs, he can create such a situation that war is unescapable.

Then it is up to congress to do the actual declaring.

The voters have nothing to say about it.

That is constitutional.

Congressman Ludlow of Indiana

seeks to amend the constitution so as to deny this power to congress without a popularly affirmative vote. That is, not unless we physically are invaded or attacked, requiring instant action.

HOW "UNDEMOCRATIC"?

Objection to this process is based, partly, upon the contention that, while we were conducting our plebiscite, the enemy would be licking the tar out of us.

It is an objection which does not seem to hold good, considering that we could begin fighting instantly, if actually invaded or attacked.

But waive that point.

Objectors complain that the Ludlow program would be undemocratic.

It might be un-military. It might be impractical. Yet how could it be undemocratic?

MUSSOLINI'S VIEW

The notion is what excites Premier Mussolini's risibilities. What makes HIM laugh is the suggestion that anyone could assume that it IS democratic.

"Of course it isn't," he reasons.

"Phooey!" In effect, says the Popolo d'Italia, "to democracy."

"That's what's the matter with it."

"Democracies themselves are afraid of democracy in emergencies."

"When the supreme interests of a people are at stake even the most democratic governments take care not to trust the people's judgment."

UNASSAILABLE?

O. K. No opponent of the Ludlow amendment can answer that argument except by saying that, normally, he is a democrat, but, in emergencies, a Fascist.

If you oppose Ludlowism, in principal the Mussolini-istic doctrine is unassailable.

NEVER TESTED ON ISSUE

A qualification. Some politicians maintain that our government is representative.

If, they reason, our representatives declare war, that represents us.

In the main, if we elect a representative, we know upon what issue we elect him. But we do not often elect him upon a peace-or-war issue; that arises suddenly.

It is an issue upon which he has not been tested.

He uses his own judgment.

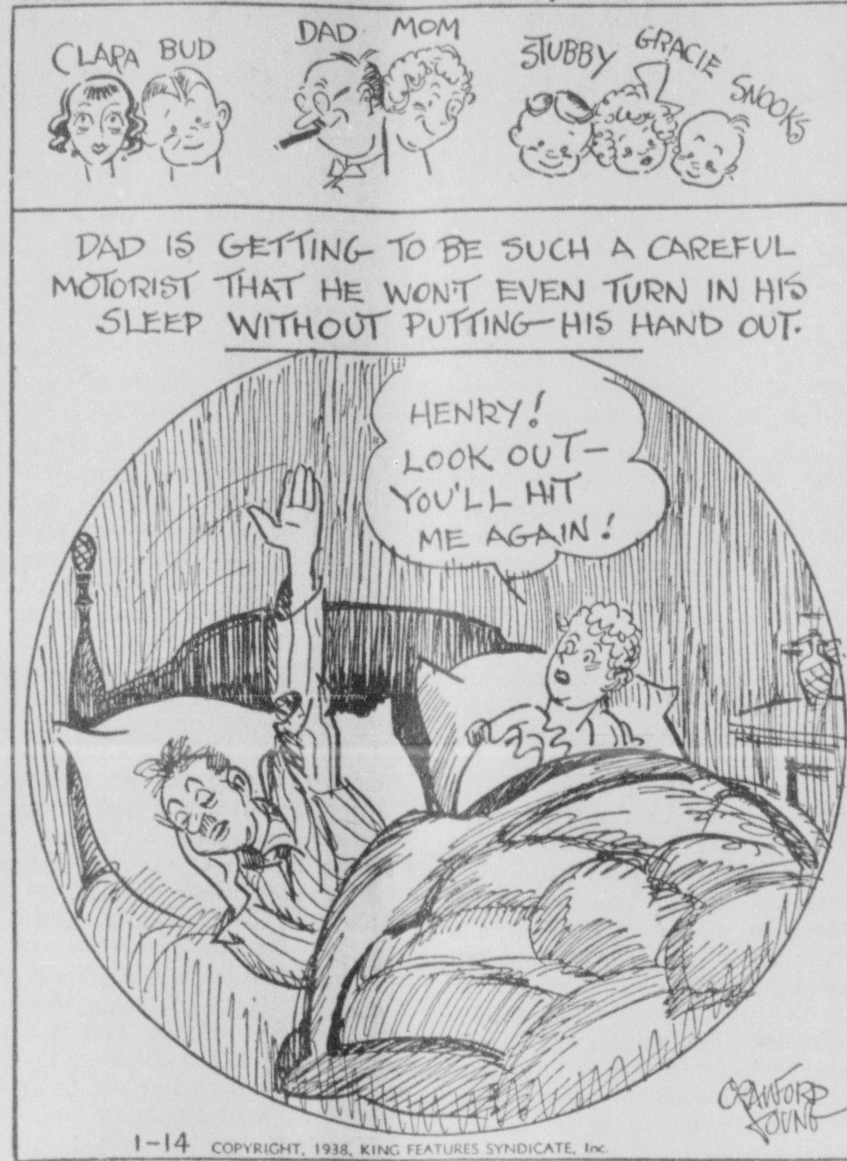

His constituency does not know which side he is on; he does not know which side his constituency is on.

Is that representative?

It looks queer to Benito Mussolini.

Folk Not "Safe at Home." Hazards Many

by LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE RED CROSS lists a number of "don'ts" for householders:
Don't leave toys on the staircase.
Don't open cans with a knife.
Don't turn on the light from the bathtub.
Don't leave your medicine chest open.
Don't smoke in bed.
Don't use a rocking chair for a ladder.

There are several others that apply more to summer than to winter. These emphasize that "safe at home" is just a phrase. The home is almost as dangerous as the automobile. I list them by request, but I am not sanguine that the warnings do much good. Even when people have had a warning, there are plenty of people who will smoke in bed tonight immediately after reading this article. And there are even people on record who have set fire to the bed, and

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

I CANNOT pretend that there was anything sinister in the atmosphere that evening. Nothing of the sort that is supposed to precede a crime. Nobody walked about looking furtive, no whispered quarrels were interrupted, no mysterious strangers lurked near the house. Although afterwards, as you may imagine, I went over the events of the day again and again in my mind, I could remember nothing which might have served as a warning, nothing at all extraordinary in anyone's behavior. That is why the thing came as such an abominable shock to me.

I remember, of course—I have good cause to remember—that we discussed crime over our cocktails. But we discussed it in general terms, and how could one have guessed that there was any relevance in the discussion? And I could not say for certain who had brought up the subject. Perhaps if I could have done so, it would have helped us later to understand. For that discussion was relevant, appallingly relevant, in a very special sense. As you shall see.

But at the time—well, at the Thursons' week-end parties, crime might be discussed, or religion, politics, the cinema, or ghosts. Any topic of general interest which arose was sure to be pretty well threshed out. That was the kind of party which the Thursons gave, a party at which everyone talked a great deal, shouting opinions which he would afterward have denied, and trying to shout them as cleverly as possible. I do not mean that it was all rather self-conscious and airy, like those awful parties in London at which women with unpleasant breath advocate free love and nudism. But at the Thursons' conversation was enjoyed, and not treated as a tiresome stop-gap between dinner and bridge.

Dr. Thurston himself was no conversationalist, though he enjoyed listening, and could put in an incentive phrase now and again. He was a big, bespectacled man, rather Teutonic in appearance, and in manner, too, for he showed a jolly German simplicity and sentimentality to everyone. He liked pressing his guests to food and drink and cigars, with booming emphasis. He had been the local doctor in that Sussex village, till he married, and although he no longer practiced he had kept on the house, because he liked it, and allowed the new practitioner to build afresh. It was understood that Mrs. Thurston had money, at all events they had been very well off since their marriage, and entertained a great deal.

She, too, was amiable, most amiable, but not very intelligent. Although I stayed with the Thursons many times, and must have spent hours in the same room with Mary Thurston, I cannot recall a single sentence that she uttered. She was stout, and spent a great deal of money on her clothes, a big, blonde, rather painted woman, easy-going and quite unpretentious. I can see her clearly enough, even if I cannot remember words of hers, beaming round on us all, filling quite a wide armchair, giggling like a girl at flattery, obviously overflowing with kindness. The Goddess of Plenty, someone once called her, aptly enough, for as a hostess, from the practical point of view, she was supreme. The food was really exquisite, the house beautifully kept, and Mrs. Thurston had that important gift—a memory for drinks. She was a good woman.

Whoever may have started discussing crime, it was Alec Norris who did most of the talking, though he pretended to be contemptuous of the topic.

"Crime?" he said. "Can't we talk about anything else? Don't we get enough of it in books and films? I'm sick to death of this crime, crime, crime, wherever you turn."

Dr. Thurston chuckled. He knew Norris, and knew why he spoke so bitterly. Norris was an unsuccessful writer of novels very different from murder mysteries—rather intense psychological books, with a good deal of sex in them. Dr. Thurston saw his chance of making Norris excited.

"But is it crime in those books?" he asked. "Crime as it really happens?"

Norris might have been a diver on a springboard. He hesitated for one moment, blinking at Thurston, then he plunged. "No, I'm damned if it is," he said. "Literary crime is all baffling mystery and startling clues. Whereas in real life, murder, for instance, nearly always turns out to be some sordid business of a strangled servant girl. There are only two kinds of murder which could baffle the police for one second. One that committed by a man with a victim who cannot be missed—like the recent Brighton murder. The other is the act of a madman, who murders for the sake of murder, without another motive. No pre-meditated murder could puzzle the police for very long. Where there's a motive and the victim is identified, there's an arrest."

He paused to swallow the rest of his cocktail. I was watching him, thinking what an odd-looking fellow Alec Norris was—narrow in head and body, with a bony face in which jaw and teeth, cheekbones and forehead protruded, while the flesh seemed to have shrunk till it barely covered the skull.

Another guest spoke then. Young David Strickland, I think it was. "But an arrest doesn't always mean a verdict of guilty," he said. "There have been murderers so desperate that though they knew beforehand they would be suspected and probably charged, they took the chance. They were clever enough not to provide enough evidence."

I did not look with much interest towards Strickland, for I knew him quite well. He was younger than any of us, a thick-set fellow, fond of sport, particularly of racing. He was apt to try to borrow a liver from you, but bore no malice if it was refused. He was some sort of protégé of the Thursons, and Dr. Thurston sometimes spoke to his wife of him good-humoredly as "your lover, my dear." There was nothing in that, however, though I could imagine Mary Thurston helping him out of difficulties. Nothing of the glib about young Strickland, a hard-drinking, gambling type, fond of smutty stories.

Alec Norris brushed aside his interruption. "The police will find the evidence, when they know their man," he said, and returned to his condemnation of detective fiction. "It's all so artificial," he said. "So unrelated to life. You, all of you, know these literary murders. Suddenly, in the middle of a party—like this one, perhaps—someone is found dead in the adjoining room. By the trickery of the novelist all the guests and half the staff are suspect. Then in comes the wonderful detective, who neatly proves that it was in fact the only person you never suspected at all. Curtain!"

You're Telling Me!

JAPANESE military experts are now working out a scheme whereby they would send messages during a battle in form of microscopic notes attached to bees. Looks as though someone is going to get stung.

Japan has gone a long way in our lifetime. It's a far cry from Madame Butterfly to Private Bum Bill Bee, army dispatch carrier.

One thing the Japanese high command probably has overlooked is that naturalists say that among all insects the bees are true Communists.

That being the case the Nipponese war lords may find that scrapping with the Chinese is as peaceful as a game of checkers compared with trying to put down a nation-wide mutiny in the hives.

Meanwhile, American scientists are reported going ahead with experiments tending to change the home-life of queen bees. As though that were any of their buzziness!

A poet once said that the true music of the fields is that made by bees hovering over flowers. Sure, man's the time we've heard a whole swarm of them rendering a ditty that sounded just like "Hum, Sweet Hum."

Bugologists also claim that the worker bee has a greater homing instinct than the highly publicized pigeon. No wonder—the bee always goes home because that's where her honey is.

Many Ladies' Societies Have Meetings Thursday

Large Attendances Reported From Communities

Thursday marked the meeting day for various Ladies' Aid societies of the churches of the county. Five organizations met in the communities adjacent to the churches and accepted the hospitality of the January hostesses. All sessions were well attended and many visitors were present.

The Robtown Ladies' Aid society met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harold Fee, of the Florence Chapel Road with 35 members and guests attending.

Mrs. Richard Hudson, vice president, was in the chair for the business and devotional session. The program consisted of readings by Mrs. Roloff Wolford and Mrs. Howard Gloyd, of Columbus. One contest was conducted by Mrs. Fee. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Fee assisted by Mrs. James Wolford, Mrs. Thomas Wright and Mrs. Otis Williams. On Thursday, Jan. 20, the society will meet at the home of Mrs. Howard Younkin for an all day quilting party. A covered dish dinner will be served at noon.

Mrs. Mabel Isham, of Scioto township, will be hostess at the next regular meeting of the society, Thursday, Feb. 10. Her assistants will be Mrs. Younkin, Mrs. Cio Philo and Mrs. Lou West.

Christ Lutheran Ladies' Aid society met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edward Hulise, of Deer Creek township. The business meeting and devotionals were in charge of the Rev. G. L. Troutman, president. Mrs. Mary K. Bower, chairman of the Thank-offering committee of the Columbus group, gave an interesting talk on the importance of the Thank-offering boxes. The last number of the program was a piano solo by Doris Hulise.

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Hulise, assisted by Mrs. Van Meter Hulise, served delightful refreshments to 20 members and guests. Mrs. George Kerns and Mrs. Lyle Davis will be next hostesses.

Mrs. Roy Newlon, near Williamsport, entertained the January meeting of the Union Chapel Ladies' Aid society, Thursday afternoon. Nineteen members and visitors attended the meeting. Mrs. Herbert Thomas, president, led the devotional and business meeting, which was opened with song followed by scripture reading and prayer. Some time was devoted to making plans for the lunch which the society will serve at the stock sale.

Several readings followed including "New Year", by Miss Bertha Jones; "Being a Man", by Mrs. Roy Rittinger; "A Year's Supply", by Mrs. Paul Counts.

During the social period, contests were conducted by Mrs. Lee Winks and Mrs. Lawrence Goodman, with prizes won by Miss Emmaline Newlon and Miss Jones. Refreshments were served at the close of the afternoon.

Eighteen members and guests partook of the hospitality extended by Mrs. Clarence Dumm, of Pickaway township, Thursday afternoon, when she entertained the Salem Ladies' Aid society.

The business and devotional hour was in charge of Mrs. Ollie Harral, president. During the program Mrs. Frank Batterson, of Kingston, a returned missionary to South America, gave an interesting talk on the customs of the people, and their manner of living. Mrs. Frank McAfee pleased the group with a reading. Refreshments were served during the social hour by Mrs. Dumm.

Mrs. David Sherwood, Pickaway township, will entertain the next meeting of the society, Thursday, Feb. 10.

Pleasant View Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. W. I. Spangler, near Tarlton, Thursday for its January meeting. Mrs. E. C. Aldenderfer was in charge of the business meeting and devotionals. Miss Blanche Waliser played a piano solo for the opening number of the afternoon's program. Readings by Miss Anna Penlius, Mrs. N. C. Aldenderfer, and Mrs. Noah Strous followed.

BOARD TO HEAR ABOUT VENTURI HITTING CANVASS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — (UP) — An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the knockout of Enrico Venturi, Italian lightweight, by Henry Armstrong at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night was planned today by the N. Y. Boxing commission.

Venturi, who went down and was counted out from what many termed a "mythical" low blow in the sixth round, already is under 30 days suspension for failing to scale the required 137 pounds.

His manager, Carmine Tarantino, and his two seconds have been ordered to appear at next Tuesday's commission meeting. The commissioners, it was said, are determined to ascertain whether Venturi was obeying orders when he remained down and was counted out after being low.

"Venturi has been fighting in New York long enough to know the rules concerning a foul blow," said Commission Chairman General John J. Phelan who has ordered Venturi's purse of $6,150.00 held up until after Tuesday's meeting. "There was absolutely no excuse for his behavior unless, of course, he was merely obeying orders."

MARIETTA QUINT TO MEET OHIO U. IN COURT GAME

ATHENS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Ohio university, defending co-champions of the Buckeye conference in basketball, and Marietta of the Ohio conference, today adopted as their theme song "Let's Kiss and Make Up."

After a conference between Athletic Director O. C. Bird of Ohio U. and Dean D. T. Schoonover of Marietta at Marietta Tuesday it was announced the Bobcats and Pioneers would not play their scheduled basketball game on Feb. 10. A fist fight in the first meeting of the teams was given as the reason for the cancellation.

Dr. H. T. Houf, chairman of Ohio U.'s athletic board, however announced today the game definitely would be played. He said the decision was reached following a conference with Athletic Director Frank Hayes and Donald Drumm of Marietta, and a meeting of his board.

Hayes, a stormy petrel in Ohio collegiate basketball ranks, was not consulted prior to the original announcement of the cancellation. While he declined to comment on the situation at that time it is known definitely that he intended to make demands on Ohio U. for an additional share of the first game's gate receipts if the return encounter was not played. How strongly this factor led to the reconsideration and reversal of the original decision was a matter of conjecture.

CHICAGO BEARS AND ALL-STARS MEET IN SOUTH

CHICAGO, Jan. 14 — (UP) — A squad of 25 Chicago Bears, western division champions in the National Professional football league, left today for Houston, Tex., where they will meet an all-star team on Sunday.

The toughest pickup teams the Bears ever have met in post-season competition, will include several last year's college stars and regulars in the National league.

Assistant Coach Luke Johnson will have charge of the squad until Owner George Halas joins the team next week for the rest of its post-season tour which includes games with the professional champion Washington Redskins both in the Dallas Cotton Bowl and Miami Orange Bowl and against an all-star team at New Orleans, La., Jan. 30.

"Repeaters" Expected in Cage Tourney

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — A year ago when 16 Class "A" basketball teams fought their way through sectional and district meets to gain the right to compete in the annual state scholastic tournament here, only six of the quintets were holdovers from the 1936 cage classic.

On the basis of play during the first month of the current campaign a survey disclosed today that the number of "repeaters" probably would be larger this season when the schoolboy tournament is held March 17-18-19.

Of the 16 "A" teams in the state meet last year, seven are still unbeaten for the present season. In the ranks of the perfect record teams are Hamilton, the defending champion, which has grabbed seven straight victories; Bridgeport, with seven triumphs; Akron North, with six victories; Warren and Canton McKinley, with five wins each; Massillon and Newark, with four decisions each; and Rossford, with three victories.

To Combat Baugh

PREPARING to match the passes of Sammy Baugh, members of the Los Angeles Bulldogs build up for a "ladder" pass. The Bulldogs, Pacific Coast All-Stars, meet Baugh's team, the champion Redskins, Jan. 16, in San Francisco. That is Bill Howard, of U. S. C., flinging the ball.

FIGHT RESULTS

GOLFING STARS VIE FOR CROSBY TOURNEY CASH

DEL MAR, Cal., Jan. 14 — (UP) — Golfers arrived by the dozens today to compete in the $3,000 pro-amateur and open tournament sponsored annually at Rancho Santa Fe course by the film crooner, Bing Crosby.

A host of the nation's professionals, most of whom played in the recent Los Angeles open, led the parade. Dozens of amateurs—so many that the limit of players twice was been boosted—followed, with promise of almost 275 contenders when play gets under way tomorrow morning.

The professionals are headed by Jimmy Thompson, winner of the Los Angeles open, who will team with Jim McHale of San Gabriel; Harry Cooper, top money winner of the year, paired with Bruce McCormick, national public links champion; Leo Diegel, playing with Dick Arlen, and Sam Snead, playing with Doug MacKinnon.

The amateur list is comprised of sport writers, actors, ex-football players, wrestlers, tennis players and others.

SCHAEFER RETAINS LEAD

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Jake Schaefer of Chicago held on to his commanding lead today entering the ninth block of his 4,200-point match with Welker Cochran of San Francisco for the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship. Cochran is the defending title-holder.

Only Ashland and Perrysburg from among the 1937 tournament teams have failed to win more games than they have lost during the early portion of their schedules.

With only one player from last year's quintet back, Ashland's new coach, John Longley, has found the going exceptionally difficult. His team has won two games and lost five. Perrysburg's record is the same.

After Hamilton copped the state title, Coach Lou Hirt deplored the fact his titular combine would be wrecked by graduation and that he stood practically no chance of seeing his team join Dayton Stivers and Dover as the only school to win the state tournament more than once since the Ohio High School Athletic Association took charge of the event in 1923.

Rapid development of reserve material of last season, however, has enabled Hamilton to keep intact a brilliant victory string that extends back to the final weeks of the 1936 season. Hamilton has not been beaten in its last 34 starts. The record will be at stake

CROWD TO FILL ALL AVAILABLE PLACES IN GYM

Injury To Chuck Gray May Impair Chances Of Home Court Quintet

FIRST FRAY AT 7 P. M.

Other Teams Get Action; Circleville To Play

The eyes of Pickaway county basketball fans will be on Ashville Friday evening when the Pickaway township and Ashville cagers meet in a cage game that may decide the league championship. The competing teams are the only aggregations in the county with clean slates.

The game will follow a girls' contest, equally as important, since each of the sextets has lost one game. Darby is tied for first, too, by virtue of a single defeat.

The Ashville gymnasium is expected to be filled to capacity long before game time. Attendance at all Ashville games is good, but many would not be surprised to see a record set this evening.

The Ashville defense is expected to be centered on Creighton Anderson, one of the speediest scorers in the county. With Anderson comes George Wilson, tall light haired youth, who can hit the hoop from many positions.

Roose, fast ace of Al Kauber's guards, will probably draw the assignment to watch Anderson.

Ashville's scoring corps took a blow this week when Chuck Gray, roly-poly digger, hurt an ankle. Whether he will be ready for service tonight is not certain. Junior Gregg will get most of the Pickaway defensive's attention.

Two officials, appointed by the State Officials' association, have been assigned to work the game. They are Buchmann and Rush, both of whom have been doing Ohio conference work this year. Festivities will start at 7 p. m. with the reserve teams of the schools meeting.

Other contests tonight send Walnut to Jackson, New Holland to Washington, Muhlenberg to Salter Creek, and Deer Creek to Perry.

Circleville high cagers will provide opposition for Waverly on the latter court.

Probable starting lineups at Ashville will be:

| Ashville | Pickaway |

BOARD TO HEAR ABOUT VENTURI HITTING CANVASS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — (UP) — An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the knockout of Enrico Venturi, Italian lightweight, by Henry Armstrong at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night was planned today by the N. Y. Boxing commission.

Venturi, who went down and was counted out from what many termed a "mythical" low blow in the sixth round, already is under 30 days suspension for failing to scale the required 137 pounds.

His manager, Carmine Tarantino, and his two seconds have been ordered to appear at next Tuesday's commission meeting. The commissioners, it was said, are determined to ascertain whether Venturi was obeying orders when he remained down and was counted out after being low.

"Venturi has been fighting in New York long enough to know the rules concerning a foul blow," said Commission Chairman General John J. Phelan who has ordered Venturi's purse of $6,150.90 held up until after Tuesday's meeting. "There was absolutely no excuse for his behavior unless, of course, he was merely obeying orders."

MARIETTA QUINT TO MEET OHIO U. IN COURT GAME

ATHENS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Ohio university, defending co-champions of the Buckeye conference in basketball, and Marietta of the Ohio conference, today adopted as their theme song "Let's Kiss and Make Up."

After a conference between Athletic Director O. C. Bird of Ohio U. and Dean D. T. Schoonover of Marietta at Marietta Tuesday it was announced the Bobcats and Pioneers would not play their scheduled basketball game on Feb. 10. A first fight in the first meeting of the teams was given as the reason for the cancellation.

Dr. H. T. Houf, chairman of Ohio U's athletic board, however announced today the game definitely would be played. He said the decision was reached following a conference with Athletic Director Frank Hayes and Donald Drumm of Marietta, and a meeting of his board.

Hayes, a stormy petrel in Ohio collegiate basketball ranks, was not consulted prior to the original announcement of the cancellation. While he declined to comment on the situation at that time it is known definitely that he intended to make demands on Ohio U. for an additional share of the first game's gate receipts if the return encounter was not played. How strongly this factor led to the reconsideration and reversal of the original decision was a matter of conjecture.

CHICAGO BEARS AND ALL-STARS MEET IN SOUTH

CHICAGO, Jan. 14 — (UP) — A squad of 25 Chicago Bears, western division champions in the National Professional football league, left today for Houston, Tex., where they will meet an all-star team on Sunday.

The all-stars reportedly one of the toughest pickup teams the Bears ever have met in post-season competition, will include several last year's college stars and regulars in the National league.

Assistant Coach Luke Johnson will have charge of the squad until Owner George Halas joins the team next week for the rest of its post-season tour, which includes games with the professional champion Washington Redskins both in the Dallas Cotton Bowl and Miami Orange Bowl and against an all-star team at New Orleans, La., Jan. 30.

"Repeaters" Expected in Cage Tourney

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14 — (UP) — A year ago when 16 Class "A" basketball teams fought their way through sectional and district meetings to gain the right to compete in the annual state scholastic tournament here, only six of the quintets were holdovers from the 1936 cage classic.

On the basis of play during the first month of the current campaign a survey disclosed today that the number of "repeaters" probably would be larger this season when the schoolboy tournament is held March 17-18-19.

Of the 16 "A" teams in the state meet last year, seven are still unbeaten for the present season. In the ranks of the perfect record teams are Hamilton, the defending champion, which has grabbed seven straight encounters; Bridgeport, with seven triumphs; Akron North, with six victories; Warren and Canton McKinley, with five wins each; Massillon and Newark, with four decisions each; and Rossford, with three victories.

To Combat Baugh

PREPARING to match the passes of Sammy Baugh, members of the Los Angeles Bulldogs build up for a "ladder" pass. The Bulldogs, Pacific Coast All-Stars, meet Baugh's team, the champion Redskins, Jan. 16, in San Francisco. That is Bill Howard, of U. S. C., kinging the ball.

GOLFING STARS VIE FOR CROSBY TOURNEY CASH

DEL MAR, Cal., Jan. 14 — (UP) — Golfers arrived by the dozens today to compete in the $3,000 pro-amateur and open tournament sponsored annually at Rancho Santa Fe course by the film crooner, Bing Crosby.

A host of the nation's professionals, most of whom played in the recent Los Angeles open, led the parade. Dozens of amateurs—so many that the limit of players twice was been boosted—followed, with promise of almost 275 contenders when play gets under way tomorrow morning.

The professionals are headed by Jimmy Thompson, winner of the Los Angeles open, who will team with Jim McHale of San Gabriel; Harry Cooper, top money winner of the year, paired with Bruce McCormick, national public links champion; Leo Diegel, playing with Dick Arlen, and Sam Snead, playing with Doug MacKinnon.

The amateur list is comprised of sport writers, actors, ex-football players, wrestlers, tennis players and others.

SCHAEFER RETAINS LEAD
NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Jake Schaefer of Chicago held on to his commanding lead today entering the ninth block of his 4,200-point match with Welker Cochran of San Francisco for the world's 18.2 ballgame billiard championship. Cochran is the defending title-holder.

Other Teams Get Action; Circleville To Play

The eyes of Pickaway county basketball fans will be on Ashville Friday evening when the Pickaway township and Ashville cagers meet in a cage game that may decide the league championship. The competing teams are the only aggregations in the county with clean slates.

The game will follow a girls' contest, equally as important, since each of the sextets has lost one game. Darby is tied for first, too, by virtue of a single defeat.

The Ashville gymnasium is expected to be filled to capacity long before game time. Attendance at all Ashville games is good, but many would not be surprised to see a record set this evening.

The Ashville defense is expected to be centered on Creighton Anderson, one of the speediest scorers in the county. With Anderson comes George Wilson, tall light haired youth, who can hit the hoop from many positions.

Roose, fast ace of Al Kauber's guards, will probably draw the assignment to watch Anderson.

Ashville's scoring corps took a blow this week when Chuck Gray, roly-poly digger, hurt an ankle. Whether he will be ready for service tonight is not certain. Junior Gregg will get most of the Pickaway defensive's attention.

Two officials, appointed by the State Officials' association, have been assigned to work the game. They are Buchmann and Rush, both of whom have been doing Ohio conference work this year.

Feastivities will start at 7 p. m. with the reserve teams of the schools meeting.

Other contests tonight send Walnut to Jackson, New Holland to Washington, Muhlenberg to Saltcreek, and Deercreek to Perry.

Circleville high cagers will provide opposition for Waverly on the latter court.

Probable starting lineups at Ashville will be:

MIGHTY TEMPLE TEAM TO MEET MANHATTAN '5'

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — (UP) — Temple university's basketball team, with victories over such strong teams as Stanford, Illinois and Southern Methodist, invades New York tonight for a game with Manhattan at Madison Square Garden.

In the opening game of the double-header, Long Island university will meet a strong De Paul team from Chicago. De Paul defeated St. John's here last year.

Both visiting teams are favored to win.

this week-end against Springfield and Norwood.

The Northeastern district, which in recent years has sent the state tournament some of its outstanding teams, has several "power-houses" this season. Canton McKinley, a semi-finalist in the 1937 tournament, and Massillon, which fell before Hamilton in the finals, have blazed brilliant early season paths. However, one of the two must drop from the unbeaten ranks tonight as they collide at Canton in a game that headlines the state's schoolboy program.

Newark, the 1936 champion but loser in the first round last year, has another well-balanced crew. The proteges of Coach Clifford (Red) Orr tangle with another undefeated team tonight when they meet Coshocton in another feature contest.

Akron North, holder of the cage crown in 1935, appears to have a team considerably stronger than that which is sent to the meet last season. Coach Lu Hosfeld's charges seek their seventh win when they play Springfield Central Catholic Saturday.

NO TRUMP REFERRED

MINOR SUIT CONTRACTS SHOULD, as a rule, be shunned like poison when there is any other playable spot in the hand. It is even better, ordinarily, to make a try for a no trump game with only one stopper in the hostile suit. A contract in which you can afford to lose only two tricks on your way to game is almost as hard as a small slam in which you can afford to lose only one trick.

This deal occurred in a duplicate tournament and the bidding varied at several tables. All West players started with 1-Club, but from there on the bidding proceeded along different lines.

At one table, after the club bid, North doubled, East redoubled, South called 1-Heart, West passed, North bid 1-Spade, East 2-Clubs, South 2-Hearts and West jumped to 6-Clubs, which North doubled.

At this contract the opponents were able to defeat East-West by capturing one heart and two diamonds.

At another table the bidding was 1-Club by West, 1-Spade by North, 1-No Trump by East, a pass by South, 2-Clubs by West and 3-No Trumps by East. With an opening bid made by his partner, East figured his partner for diamond stoppers. East's fine club fit also indicated to him that a no trump game was a safe spot.

The spade 9 was led against this contract and the declarer was able to make 4-No Trumps.

WATERLOO AUTO CRASH LEADS TO INVESTIGATION OF CORN THEFT SERIES

SHERIFF JAILS SUSPECT AFTER FAYETTE PROBE

Ex-Convict Goes Back To Ohio Penitentiary For Part In Theft—

HOUSE VERANDA STRUCK

Several Farmers Lose Portion Of Crop

BULLETIN

Connie Nance was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail Friday by B. T. Hedges, justice of peace, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving and concealing property. Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Miller Fissell filed the charge.

Connie F. Nance, 42, of near Grange Hall was being held in the county jail Friday for investigation in connection with receiving and concealing corn stolen from Fayette county farmers early in January.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff announced that Nance was brought to Circleville, Thursday, following his arrest by Fayette county officers.

Investigation of the case started several days ago in Waterloo when William Binns, who lives in the former John Kidney home, near Grange Hall, drove an auto into the veranda of a home.

Binns, according to Fayette county officers, was driving a car owned by Nance. Fayette county officers said the type of tires on the car were like those on the auto used for hauling corn away from the farmers.

Ex-Convict Confesses

Nance was arrested for investigation and Clayton Taylor ex-convict, of the Mt. Sterling community, were arrested. Taylor admitted having used the Nance car to take corn from two farmers.

Officers said the corn was taken to the Nance home and later sold by Nance to a grain dealer a few miles from his home.

Taylor was returned to the Ohio penitentiary for his part in the crime. It is understood the Fayette county sheriff is uncertain what charge to place against Binns.

Those listed by officers included driving when intoxicated, driving without a license, leaving the scene of an accident, operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent, and possessing moonshine liquor.

Taylor admitted taking 20 bushels of corn from Homer Silcott on the Danville road, and a similar amount from Level Engle, in Madison township, Fayette county, the first week in January.

54-CENT KILLER HOST TO FAMILY BEFORE DEATH

STATE PRISON, FLORENCE, Ariz., Jan. 14.—(UP)—Jack Odom had his 16 relatives in for chicken dinner, told them that he "never felt happier in his life," bade them all goodbye, and stepped into the poison gas chamber at dawn today to have his life snuffed out for murder.

Odom, a Texas cotton picker when he was free, was 28 years old. He killed Charles E. Goade, another cotton picker, who lay asleep in a wagon. It was murder for profit. Odom went through the dead man's pockets to reap the rewards of his crime, and found only 54 cents.

He presided at the family reunion in his cell last night by the sufferance of Warden A. J. Barnes. There were 16 relatives present, including the condemned man's wife, who came from Corsicana, Tex., for the occasion. His mother and several brothers and sisters also attended.

His mother, Mrs. R. Hazelton of Tolleson, Ariz., requested a picture of her doomed son and a photographer was called in to take it. Odom joked with his guards during the picture taking about how good looking he was.

JUDGES TO WIN SALARY BOOSTS IN NEW MEASURE

A bill to increase the salaries of Common Pleas court judges was approved by the Ohio Senate this week and sent to the House. The bill would boost the portion of the judges' salaries paid by the counties on population basis. The state pays each jurist $3,000 a year.

In Pickaway county the salary would be boosted from $3,817 to $5,361.

PARTY DRIVING BECOMES PAYING JOB AT COLLEGE

DENVER (UP)—University students' ingenuity has created a new method of earning money to defray expenses. The latest wrinkle is "party driving."

The "party drivers" guarantee sober driving for students on parties. Denver police have started to arrest several drivers of late whose cars were filled with singing, shouting college students, only to be checked by the explanation—"I'm a party driver."

GOVERNOR SAYS COMMITTEEMAN UNFAIR IN TALK

name of public decency to name those who are guilty, and specify their offenses, what state officials have done wrong, and what did they do?

"If you will now do the moral thing and name the guilty persons, I will guarantee on submission of reasonable proof, to send them to the grand jury for indictment. There is no one in the state government whom we cannot fire and prosecute, if there be any wrong-doers."

"If you do not cooperate in the manner suggested, then I must brand you as a cowardly self-seeker, who tries by the use of poison words to climb into a position of power and trust, but who in the pursuit of this valuing ambition can achieve nothing but a trail of bitterness."

Proof Asked

"I charge now that you have been an active, but secretive member of the conspiracy gang. Your army of agents have been circulating venomous rumors with deliberation and malice aforethought, and now you rise with mock heroism and seek to capitalize on your own malicious propaganda. The time has come for you to produce tangible proof or stand convicted of malicious slander of the innocent."

"Everyone was shocked by your show of poor sportsmanship after your defeat in a fair primary fight in 1934. You sulked like a spoiled boy who couldn't take it. William G. Pickrel, the other primary candidate, stood out in refreshing contrast to your unsportsmanlike conduct."

"It is charged that you did not vote for me in 1934. The election was no sooner over than you and your political henchmen started to talk about myself as a one-termer. No doubt the wish was father to the thought."

The governor said that he did not reply to Sawyer's attack at the Jackson Day rally because "I chose to observe the proprieties of the occasion, remain a gentleman, and talk about more pleasant things."

Many Humiliated

"You complain about bitterness and discord in the party, and yet you were the only one who injected such a note at that banquet. Nearly everyone present was humiliated by your conduct, including most of your friends," the governor continued.

"You sought by secretive and underhanded means to bring about Republican success in 1934 and again in 1936, and now you have the effrontery to ask the Democrats for the nomination for governor. The party means nothing to you at any time, except when you can use it for selfish purposes. You are never interested in individual Democrats, except when you want to use them for your self advancement. At other times you treat them with haughty disdain, as though they were too lowly and menial to be worthy of your aristocratic smile."

"It may be that your tactics will force me to be a candidate for re-election, although I have not been terribly interested in the subject. The work of the governor's office is very hard."

"But you undertake to start an unsportsmanlike fight before I reached a decision. You hit below the belt. Well, sir, if you want to fight, you may possibly have one. In that event I promise no punches will be pulled."

"You must expect to take blow for blow, and maybe a little extra for good measure, and stand up to it like a man, which you have not done in the past. My fight would be in the open and in the daylight. It would not be cast on the level of bitterness but on the stern realities of politics. If I should be a candidate, and to the extent that god gives me the strength to fight against unscrupulous enemies, that contest would not be child-play."

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 14.—(UP)—Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman for Ohio, today promised an announcement "in the near future" on whether he intends to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

At the Jackson Day dinner of the Norwood Democratic club last night, Sawyer was presented with petition bearing 120,000 names, urging him to be a candidate. The petition was presented by Miss Florence E. Miller of Columbus, chairman of the "draft Sawyer for governor" committee; R. L. Roby, John Collins and Don E. Alexander, members of a veterans' organization backing Sawyer.

Lewis also conferred in New York with Thomas Moses, vice-president of United States Steel Corporation, and Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing committee, an affiliate of the C. I. O. which seeks a renewal of its contract with "big steel."

It was believed that Lewis' conference with U. S. Steel executives was linked with a rumored reduction of steel prices. It was known that several of the New Deal's so-called trust-busters believed that steel prices were too high.

Details of the new White House conference were unknown, but it generally was understood that Mr. Roosevelt, in his search for a recession remedy, was prepared to seek the advice of more businessmen and labor leaders.

The names of other individuals the President expects to talk with soon were not revealed. However, a prominent New York businessman associated with the administration, said that Mr. Roosevelt probably would meet other labor leaders after he has conferred next Wednesday with 50 industrialists who comprise Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper's business advisory council.

MILLBURY, Jan. 14 — (UP) — An ounce of milk from her bottle ran into the lungs of the four-month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Boecher during the night, literally drowning the baby, Coroner Halford E. Whitacre said today.

The mother found the baby dead in her crib this morning. The hole in the bottle's nipple was said to have been too big.

JUDGES TO WIN SALARY BOOSTS IN NEW MEASURE

A bill to increase the salaries of Common Pleas court judges was approved by the Ohio Senate this week and sent to the House. The bill would boost the portion of the judges' salaries paid by the counties on population basis. The state pays each jurist $3,000 a year.

In Pickaway county the salary would be boosted from $3,817 to $5,361.

PARTY DRIVING BECOMES PAYING JOB AT COLLEGE

DENVER (UP)—University students' ingenuity has created a new method of earning money to defray expenses. The latest wrinkle is "party driving."

The "party drivers" guarantee sober driving for students on parties. Denver police have started to arrest several drivers of late whose cars were filled with singing, shouting college students, only to be checked by the explanation—"I'm a party driver."

GOVERNOR SAYS COMMITTEEMAN UNFAIR IN TALK

Cincinnati "Hit Below Belt" At Big Gathering, Executive Claims

(Continued from Page One) name of public decency to name those who are guilty, and specify their offenses, what state officials have done wrong, and what did they do?

"If you will now do the moral thing and name the guilty persons, I will guarantee on submission of reasonable proof, to send them to the grand jury for indictment. There is no one in the state government whom we cannot fire and prosecute, if there be any wrong-doers.

"If you do not cooperate in the manner suggested, then I must brand you as a cowardly self-seeker, who tries by the use of poison words to climb into a position of power and trust, but who in the pursuit of this valuating ambition can achieve nothing but a trail of bitterness.

Proof Asked

"I charge now that you have been an active, but secretive member of the conspiracy gang. Your army of agents have been circulating venomous rumors with deliberation and malice aforethought, and now you rise with mock heroism and seek to capitalize on your own malicious propaganda. The time has come for you to produce tangible proof or stand convicted of malicious slander of the innocent.

"Everyone was shocked by your show of poor sportsmanship after your defeat in a fair primary fight in 1934. You sulked like a spoiled boy who couldn't take it. William G. Pickrel, the other primary candidate, stood out in refreshing contrast to your unsportsmanlike conduct.

"It is charged that you did not vote for me in 1934. The election was no sooner over than you and your political henchmen started to talk about myself as a one-term. No doubt the wish was father to the thought."

The governor said that he did not reply to Sawyer's attack at the Jackson Day rally because "I chose to observe the proprieties of the occasion, remain a gentleman, and talk about more pleasant things."

Many Humiliated

"You complain about bitterness and discord in the party, and yet you were the only one who injected such a note at that banquet. Nearly everyone present was humiliated by your conduct, including most of your friends," the governor continued.

"You sought by secretive and underhanded means to bring about Republican success in 1934 and again in 1936, and now you have the effrontery to ask the Democrats for the nomination for governor. The party means nothing to you at any time, except when you can use it for selfish purposes. You are never interested in individual Democrats, except when you want to use them for your self advancement. At other times you treat them with haughty disdain, as though they were too lowly and menial to be worthy of your aristocratic smile.

"It may be that your tactics will force me to be a candidate for re-election, although I have not been terribly interested in the subject. The work of the governor's office is very hard.

"But you undertake to start an unsportsmanlike fight before I reached a decision. You hit below the belt. Well, sir, if you want to fight, you may possibly have one. In that event I promise no punches will be pulled.

"You must expect to take blow for blow, and maybe a little extra for good measure, and stand up to it like a man, which you have not done in the past. My fight would be in the open and in the daylight. It would not be cast on the level of bitterness but on the stern realities of politics. If I should be a candidate, and to the extent that god gives me the strength to fight against unscrupulous enemies, that contest would not be child-play."

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 14 — (UP)—Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman for Ohio, today promised an announcement "in the near future" on whether he intends to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

At the Jackson Day dinner of the Norwood Democratic club last night, Sawyer was presented with petition bearing 120,000 names, urging him to be a candidate. The petition was presented by Miss Florence E. Miller of Columbus, chairman of the "draft Sawyer for governor" committee; R. L. Roby, John Collins and Don E. Alexander, members of a veterans' organization backing Sawyer.

"I will have a statement to make in the near future with reference to the request contained in

Lewis also conferred in New York with Thomas Moses, vice-president of United States Steel Corporation, and Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing committee, an affiliate of the C. I. O. which seeks a renewal of its contract with "big steel."

It was believed that Lewis' conference with U. S. Steel executives was linked with a rumored reduction of steel prices. It was known that several of the New Deal's so-called trust-busters believed that steel prices were too high.

Details of the new White House conference were unknown, but it generally was understood that Mr. Roosevelt, in his search for a recession remedy, was prepared to seek the advice of more businessmen and labor leaders.

The names of other individuals the President expects to talk with soon were not revealed. However, a prominent New York businessman associated with the administration, said that Mr. Roosevelt probably would meet other labor leaders after he has conferred next Wednesday with 50 industrialists who comprise Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper's business advisory council.
